

Middle East Review

Call for Papers

The editors welcome submissions for the first issue of Middle East Review, to be published Hillary Term 2017.

Papers will be considered for the journal's two sections:

Research section

Articles up to 10,000 words (incl. citations) that present original material from any discipline that engages critically with Middle East and/or North Africa affairs, issues, or the study of these regions.

Policy section

Shorter briefs or position papers up to 2,000 words (incl. citations) aimed at influencing contemporary debate or policy-making.

Deadline for submission: 23 January 2017

Full submission guidelines: www.omerjournal.com/submit

Submit articles, proposals, or queries to: editors@omerjournal.com

Submissions for e-zine accepted on a rolling basis

---

Middle East Review is a new interdisciplinary journal based at St Antony's College, Oxford, devoted to critical discussion on issues relating to the Middle East and North Africa and the study of these regions. The journal aims to link academic work with contemporary societal and political issues. Middle East Review is an independent and non-partisan journal that brings together a range of individuals with different backgrounds, beliefs, ideas, aspirations, viewpoints, and methodologies, while nonetheless sharing an adherence to principles of equality, social justice, freedom of speech, and tolerance.